Dear Mrs. Meagher:

As it happens it was not you but Lana Kvetch whom I was referring to on WCAU. Lana has just finished a 1000 page manuscript on Exhibit 399b and I'm amazed that your intelligence net hasn't brought her to your attention. I didn't remember that you had made a remark very similar to Lana's until your two letters arrived today. Lana thanked me for ~~being~~^{the} courtesy of not mentioning her name (she had the modesty to realize that she is almost entirely unknown); she agreed that I had quoted her accurately, disapproved of my interpretation of her remarks, but acknowledged that I had a right to my own interpretations so long as I got the facts straight. You really should get to know her.

Exhibit ~~399~~ 399b, by the way, is the bullet which really hit Connally, which, of course, was found the day of the assassination and hidden in a sock in J. Edgar Hoover's office. It is a fairly well mutilated bullet weighing 151 grains. It was decided by the establishment to substitute an unlikely bullet (399) for this one so that ironic (not serious) leftists would have something to complain about.

Keep cool, Syl

Love,

Jerry
